Web application development involves creating dynamic applications that run on web servers and interact with users over the internet. These applications can range from simple websites to complex systems handling various functions like e-commerce, social networking, online banking, and more. This involves front-end development for the client-side interface using HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, as well as back-end development for server-side logic using programming languages like Python, JavaScript (Node.js), Java, PHP, or Ruby.

WEB APPLICATION DEVELOPEMENT

CMS DEVELOPEMENT

A content management system (CMS) is a software application or set of related programs that are used to create and manage digital content. CMSs are typically used for websites or other digital platforms where content needs to be regularly updated or edited by multiple users. They provide an intuitive interface for users to add, modify, and delete content without requiring technical knowledge of programming languages or web development.
